MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear members, colleagues, partners and friends,

Almost 8,000 children and 4,000 plus women were seen at the Women and Children Protection Units (WCPUs) last year. While one abused child is one too many, the reality is that there are millions of abused children in the country. The National Baseline Study on Violence Against Children in the Philippines (2015) showed that 3 out of 5 children have experienced physical abuse, psychological abuse, and bullying while 1 out of 5 has been sexually violated. The same study also shows that majority of the children do not tell anyone about the abuse. Less than 10% disclosed the abuse to somebody and for sexual abuse only 1.6% ever told anybody about it.

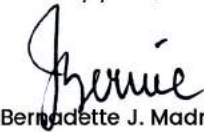

Children if ever they disclose, choose their friends and among authority figures they tell their teachers and guidance counselors. These recipients of disclosures should know how to respond and help the abused child access services in order to stop the abuse and recover and heal. We know that sexual victimization by peers can be prevented. Our Safe Schools for Teens: Prevention of Sexual Abuse of Urban Poor Teens proof-of-concept study has shown that we can increase child disclosure, increase teacher reporting, and prevent offending behavior of young teens.

The good news is that we are learning more about the drivers of violence and what may work to prevent violence from happening in the first place. We know that certain parenting programs have evidence of preventing harsh parenting. We are in the process of adapting this in our country. Masayang Pamilya (MaPa) is the Philippine version of Parenting for Lifelong Health. The plan is to integrate evidence-based parenting intervention within existing services in our country to reduce violence against children.

To start the healing, abuse has to stop and the child needs to feel safe. Physical injuries are the easiest to heal, it is the invisible injuries that are most difficult to tackle. There are evidence-based therapies that have been shown to work with traumatized children. However, access to mental health is one of the major health problems in our country. One of the solutions is to enlarge the pool of professionals that can deliver selected mental health interventions. This is where Trauma-Informed Psychosocial Processing (TIPP) comes in. This is a pioneering venture under evaluation. The need is enormous. The WCPUs are blazing a trail born out of the need of the children that we see every day and whom we would very much love to see grow up whole and be valuable contributors to our community.

Let us congratulate Kindernothilfe (KNH), our most valuable partner for 2016! KNH is going through the journey with us; establishing WCPUs in underserved areas and making mental health services accessible. KNH and partners like them ensure that we succeed in our goals. We would like to thank all of our supporters and donors who would like to remain anonymous but whose generosity allows us to do the work we do best.

Sincerely yours,

Bernadette J. Madrid, MD

NEW CASES SERVED BY WCPUs EACH YEAR

The WCPUs served about 8,000 cases in the past year. The NBS-VAC Study (2015) showed that only around 29% of children were aware of programs or services in the community that could help or support young people. Females (32.6%) were significantly more likely than males (25.7%) to be aware of such programs or services. Among those who reported awareness of programs or services for young people at the community level, approximately 13.5% (12.8% of males and 14.2% of females) ever consulted or used the services of the Child Protection Unit or the Women/Children Protection Unit in their own province or region.

DEMOGRAPHICS OF VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN (VAC) CASES

2016 WCPU STATISTICS

Sexual abuse cases (64%) are more commonly seen than physical abuse cases (17%) in the WCPUs. However, the National Baseline Study on Violence against Children in the Philippines (NBS-VAC) showed the exact opposite: about 66% of respondents reported experiencing physical violence while 17% experienced sexual violence in childhood. This validates the finding of the NBS-VAC Study where the respondents declared that of all forms of abuse, it is sexual abuse that is reportable while corporal punishment is widely accepted. Psychological abuse continues to be the least recognized although the NBS-VAC study showed that 3 out of 5 children have experienced psychological violence.

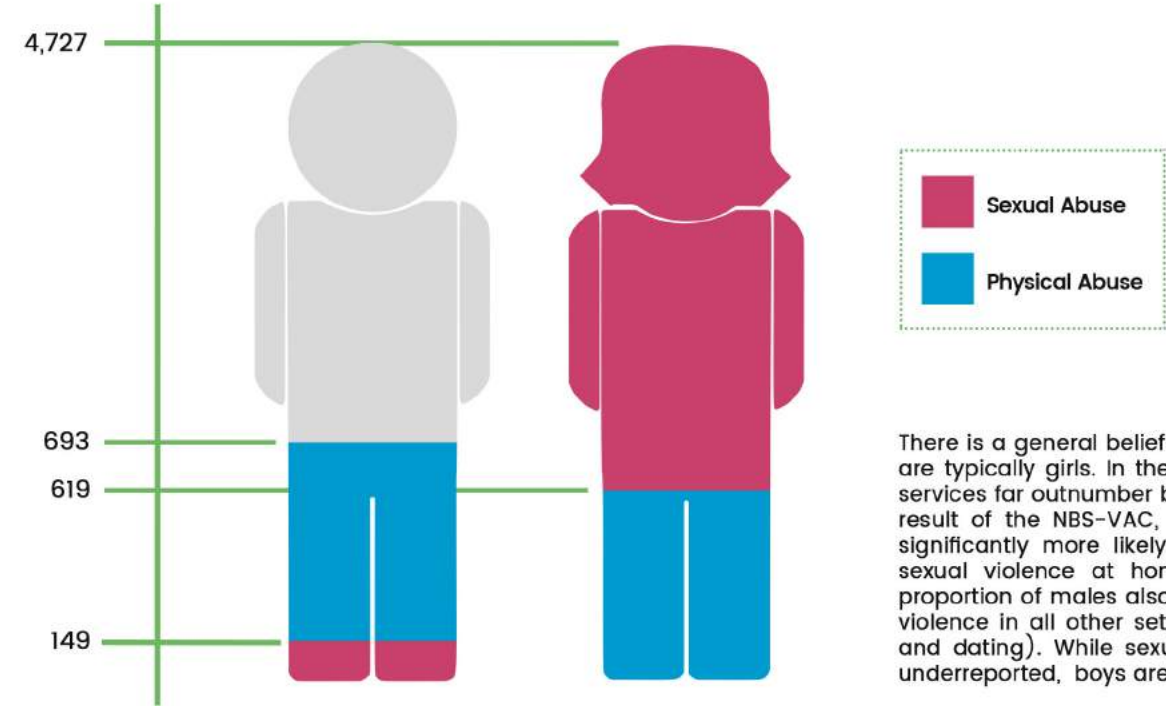

Breakdown of VAC PHYSICAL AND SEXUAL ABUSE CASES BY AGE

Sexually abused children seen in the WCPUs are typically teenagers 13 to 15 years old. Children in middle adolescence are commonly impulsive and vulnerable to peer pressure. In the NBS-VAC, sexual violence most often took place during dating (13.7%) for this age group.

Low disclosure rates are typical of sexual violence against children (NBS-VAC, 2015). In fact, sexual violence was only disclosed by a small proportion of children (1.6%). If the child disclosed at all, it was usually to a friend. The Safe Schools for Teens Study aims to help prevent sexual abuse by peers and increase the disclosure and reporting of child sexual abuse (see page 28). The low minimum age of sexual consent / statutory rape law also drive sexual violence against children (SLR-VAC).

Breakdown of VAC PHYSICAL AND SEXUAL ABUSE CASES BY GENDER

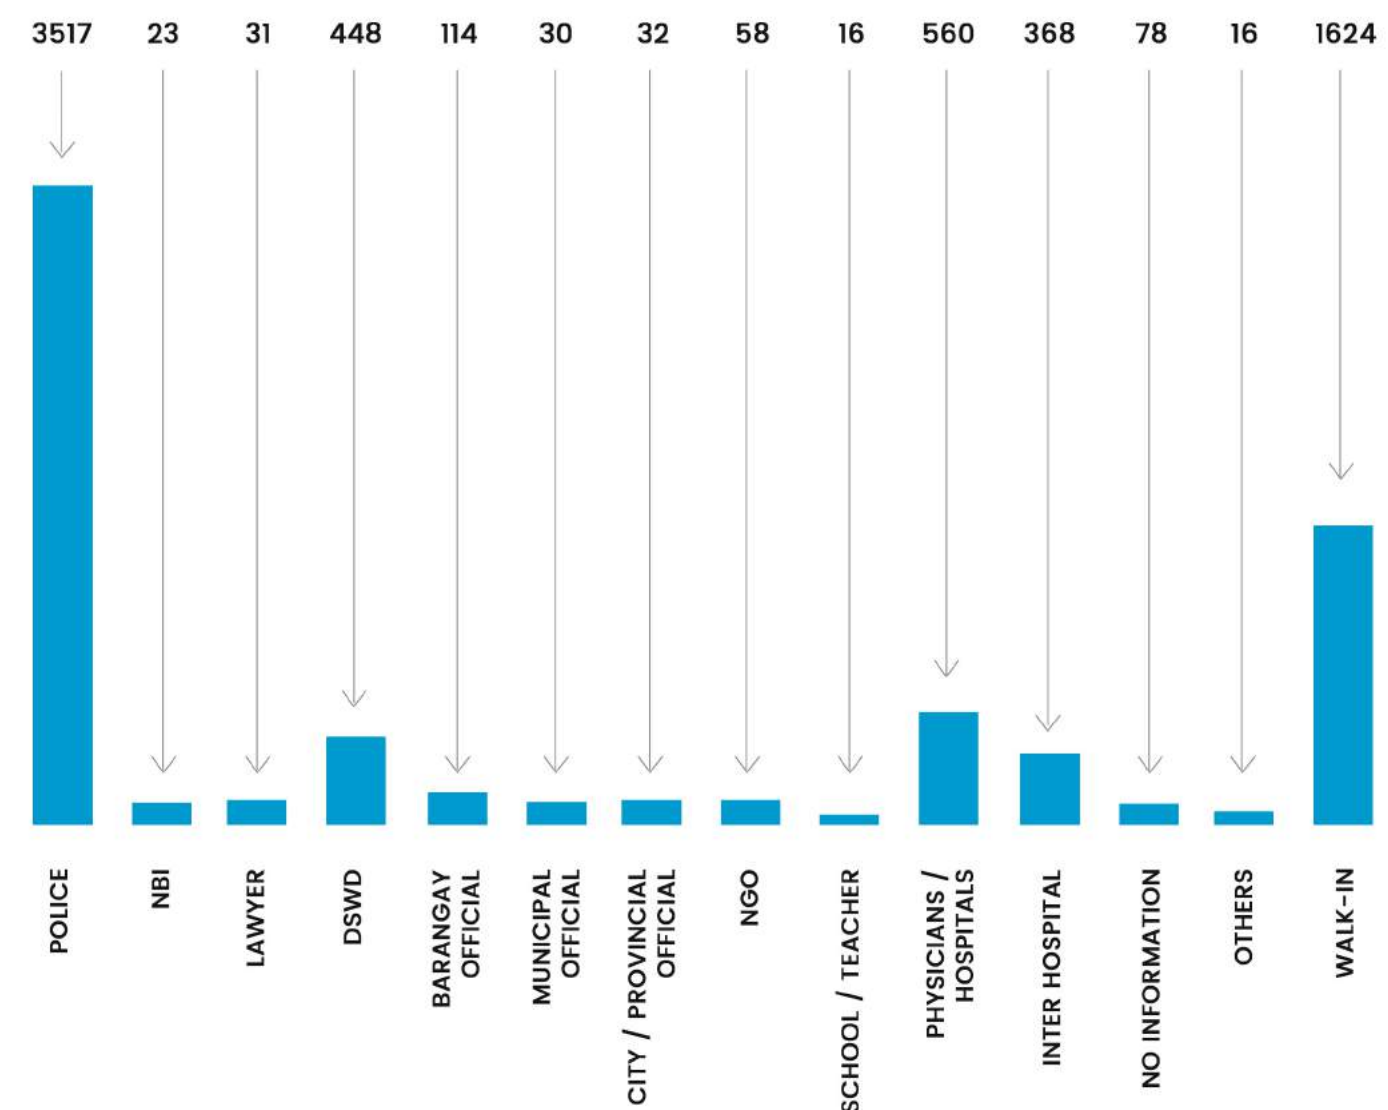

There is a general belief that sexually abused children are typically girls. In the WCPUs, girl-children seeking services far outnumber boy-children. The most glaring result of the NBS-VAC, however, is that males were significantly more likely than females to experience sexual violence at home and in school. A higher proportion of males also reported experiencing sexual violence in all other settings (community, workplace, and dating). While sexual victimization in general is underreported, boys are even more so underreported.

2016 WCPU STATISTICS

DEMOGRAPHICS OF VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN (VAC) CASES

Sources of REFERRALS and number of REFERRED VAC CASES

Presently, there is a low number of referrals to WCPUs from the schools/teachers. The NBS-VAC, however, showed that among children who sought help from authorities, the largest proportion reached out to teachers (18.6%) and guidance counselors (6.7%). Safe Schools for Teens highlights the key role of the school in child protection by increasing the capacity of teachers to recognize and respond to violence against children (see page 28).

Physical violence against children most commonly occurs at home (VACS, 2015). Corporal punishment or violent discipline is widely used by Filipino parents and accepted as a norm (SLR, 2016). Parenting programmes prevent child maltreatment by strengthening caregiver-child relationships and helping parents manage their children's behavior through effective, age-appropriate, positive parenting strategies. Parenting for Lifelong Health aims to develop and test affordable, evidence-based, and culturally-appropriate programmes to prevent child maltreatment (see page 29).

While most physical violence occurs in the form of violent discipline, it may also occur in non-disciplinary contexts. The toxic trio of social norms around physical violence, financial stress and substance misuse are risk factors (SLR, 2016).

Sexual violence against children most often occurs in the home (11.7%) and during dating (13.7%) (NBS-VACS, 2015). Lack of supervision, single headed households, and absent parents increase the risk for sexual violence against children in the home (SLR, 2016). The NBS-VAC Study (2015) identify the neighbor as the most common perpetrator of sexual violence in the community which is validated by the cases seen at the WCPUs. The increasing number of textmate / chatmate perpetrators shows the emerging threat presented by Internet and social media. Risky online behavior and lack of supervision when using the Internet exposes children to online sexual solicitation and grooming (SLR, 2016).

RESEARCH

Child Abuse, Neglect, and Exploitation Study Group

Along with the provision of comprehensive services for abused and neglected children, training of professionals, and the establishment of a national network of Women and Children Protection Units, one of the pillars of the Child Protection Network's work is in the area of child protection research. The Child Abuse, Neglect, and Exploitation (CANE) Study Group was established under the Institute of Child Health and Human Development at the University of the Philippines Manila National Institutes of Health in October 2015. CANE consolidates the efforts of multidisciplinary professionals and institutions conducting child protection related research in order to generate information that will guide the development of policies and programs for Filipino children to reduce the prevalence of violence against children. CANE is also the secretariat of the Asia Pacific Research Network on Violence in Childhood (see page 27).

PRIMARY OBJECTIVES:

To build the EVIDENCE-BASE on WHAT WORKS in the PRIMARY PREVENTION AND INTERVENTION FOR CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT in the Philippines
2.

To provide POLICY MAKERS AND PROGRAM IMPLEMENTERS with the information they need to come up with EFFECTIVE POLICIES AND STRATEGIES that can be taken to scale nationally to DECREASE THE PREVALENCE OF CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT

Asia Pacific Research Network on Violence in Childhood (APRN)

In the last five years, researchers from government agencies, civil society organizations, and universities in the East Asia and Pacific region have increasingly contributed to the evidence on preventing violence in childhood. In October 2016, Know Violence in Childhood Initiative, Child Abuse, Neglect, and Exploitation (CANE) Study Group of the University of the Philippines Manila - National Institutes of Health, and UNICEF Regional Office in Bangkok organized the meeting Developing research networks to strengthen evidence to practice in ending violence against children. The objective was to create a research network in the region that can gather evidence (aligned with the SDG targets and indicators, where possible), collaborate on research, and inform policy makers.

The Asia Pacific Research Network on Violence in Childhood was established as research nodes based in national institutions:

- Centre for Child Protection, University of Indonesia (Indonesia)
- University of Malaya (Malaysia)
- National Institutes of Health, University of Philippines Manila (Philippines)
- Institute for Community Health Research – Hue University of Medicine and Pharmacy (Vietnam).

UNICEF and the Faculties of Health and Law at the Queensland University of Technology (Australia) are supporting the APRN.

In order to contribute to evidence informed policy advocacy and motivate investments in violence prevention, the goals of the Research Network are fourfold:

- To identify and implement relevant violence prevention research aligned to the 2030 agenda;
- To strengthen human resources and social science expertise to undertake research on violence;
- To develop better tools and methods for implementing research on violence;
- To disseminate and build good practice to inform investments by governments and partners.

The APRN aims to provide needed information on the prevention of violence against children to policymakers, academics, governments, NGOs, and donors.

Safe Schools for Teens: Preventing Sexual Abuse of Poor Urban Teens

Partners:
Child Protection Network Foundation, Department of Education (DepEd), University of the Philippines College of Education, Bulatao Center for Psychology Services of Ateneo de Manila University, University of Edinburgh, UBS Optimus Foundation, Consuelo Foundation

- Objectives:
- Increased knowledge and engagement in applying a school-based primary intervention approach to sexual abuse.
 - Increased capacity of practitioners, teachers, and School Child Protection Committees to respond appropriately to disclosures and to refer and follow-up cases of child sexual abuse that come to light in school settings.
 - New relationship between teachers and child protection practitioner.
 - Increased knowledge and understanding about child sexual abuse.
 - Increased skills of young people to disclose and seek help for sexual abuse and to give help to their peers.
 - Positive changes in knowledge, attitudes, and behaviors of Grade 7 & 8 students related to sexual abuse victimization and perpetration.

Proof of concept completed in December 2016:
Safe Schools for Teens delivered a comprehensive and culture specific intervention to two public high schools in the City of Manila. As a result of the intervention, students in Grade 7 & 8, teachers, and members of the School Child Protection Committees have all shown positive changes in behavior, knowledge, and attitudes.

COMPONENTS OF SAFE SCHOOLS FOR TEENS:

1. Operationalization of the School Child Protection Committees

The Child Protection Committees of V. Mapa High School and Manila High School

DepEd Department Order No. 40 series of 2012 mandated the establishment of the school Child Protection Committee in every public school. The committee is composed of the following members: principal (chairperson), guidance counselor (vice chairperson), faculty representative, student representative, parent representative, and representative from the community, who is preferably a member of the barangay council for the protection of children.

Safe Schools for Teens helped operationalize the school Child Protection Committees. The committee members were trained to respond appropriately to reports of child abuse, conduct a risk assessment of their school environment, and develop their own localized child protection policy.

2. Teachers' Training on the 4Rs of Child Protection

The main purpose of the 4Rs Training is to improve the teachers' knowledge, skills and attitudes for the identification & reporting of potential & actual child sexual abuse cases

The results showed that the 4Rs training greatly improved the teachers' knowledge on and attitudes towards reporting child abuse:

- From less than a third, 2/3 are now knowledgeable about the potential indicators of child sexual abuse
- From 25%, 75% are confident in identifying child sexual abuse
- From 45%, 75% know the procedures for reporting child abuse

- From 40%, 33% feel apprehensive to report child sexual abuse for fear of family/community retaliation
- From 45%, 19% find it difficult to report child sexual abuse because it is hard to gather enough evidence
- From 22%, 10% lack confidence that the authorities will respond effectively to reports of child sexual abuse

3. Linked the Schools with the Child Protection Unit

Safe Schools for Teens worked with the Department of Education to establish a reporting and referral system in schools. It also established a referral system between the schools and the Child Protection Unit of the Philippine General Hospital where referred students can immediately avail of free medical, psychosocial, and legal assistance. There were fourteen referrals from the two pilot schools during the first 6 months of implementation.

4. Supplementary Modules in Values and Health for Grade 7 & 8 Students

The purpose of the modules is to increase the students' knowledge and skills and adopt the proper attitudes for the disclosure and reporting of potential and actual child sexual abuse cases and to prevent child sexual abuse.

- Supplementary Modules in Health Education
- Grade 7: Stress Buster Friends (Manage Stress through Good Friends)
 - Grade 8: Loving Relationships (Standing Up against Dating Abuse)
- Supplementary Modules in Values Education (Mindfulness)
- Grade 7 Module A: Ang Kaugnayan ng Damdamin, Nararamdaman sa Katawan, at ng Isip
 - Grade 7 Module B: Nananatili sa Di-Kaaya-Ayang Karanasan
 - Grade 8 Module A: Naglalabang Damdamin
 - Grade 8 Module B: Dating and Gender Roles
 - Grade 8 Module C: Sex at Date: Paano Yan?

- These modules were found to be particularly effective in improving emotional regulation skills for boys and emotional connectedness for all students.
- The modules reduced incidents of bullying from 83.7% to 54.5% in boys and from 79.1% to 51.7% in girls.
- It also reduced adolescent relationship violence from 42.9% to 32.2% in males and from 31.6% to 16.2% in females.

Next Steps:
DEVELOPMENT OF AN ONLINE 4RS TRAINING FOR TEACHERS

To increase the reach and scale of this project, the 4Rs Training for Teachers was transformed into an online training. A website is being finalized which will be the platform for the online training for teachers with resources for students, parents, and the general public on the Safe Schools for Teens program.

Parenting for Lifelong Health (PLH) for Young Children Aged 2 to 6 Years – Masayang Pamilya

Integrating an evidence-based parenting intervention within existing services to prevent violence against children in the Philippines

Partners: Ateneo de Manila University, Philippine Ambulatory Pediatric Association, Oxford University, Bangor University, Cape Town University, Child Protection Network Foundation, UNICEF, UBS Optimus Foundation

The aim of this project is to adapt and test PLH for Young Children with low income families in the Philippines. It will examine the cultural appropriateness, feasibility, and effectiveness of PLH for Young Children in reducing the risk of violence against children and improving positive parenting behavior in the Filipino context.

- Objectives:
- To determine the needs of parents, primary caregivers, and service providers in receiving and providing parenting services for violence prevention and improving positive parenting behavior;
 - To adapt PLH for Young Children so that it is culturally and contextually appropriate to the service delivery system in the Philippines;
 - To pilot the adapted program in order to test its feasibility and acceptability when delivered to low-income families in community settings in Metro Manila;
 - To test the effectiveness of the adapted program on parenting behaviors and other parent/child outcomes when integrated within the DSWD conditional cash transfer system; and
 - To build the knowledge and skills of practitioners in order to deliver high quality parenting education and support at scale.

AKO PARA SA BATA

THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE IN MANILA

STRESSED?

Coping, Recovery, and Healing

The evaluation of the Women and Children Protection Units (WCPUs) in 2015 showed that mental health is the service that majority of the WCPUs lack. Thus, the AKO PARA SA BATA Conference 2016 featured evidence-based mental health interventions for traumatized children to address a major gap in the assessment and management of children in need of protection. 1,455 participants, our biggest delegation yet, pledged support to protect all children on December 1-2, 2016 at SMX Convention Center Manila.

Mental health experts and renowned specialists discussed the brain and the healing process of every child and their families. Different psychological interventions were also presented. Plenary speakers, among others, were Dr. Marlene Wong, a senior associate dean and clinical professor at the University of Southern California School of Social Work, who presented Trauma Informed Care in the School Setting; Mr. Irvin S. Kalugdan, a licensed music therapist from Washington DC, who discussed current trends and perspectives of Music Therapy; Dr. Honey A. Carandang, the pioneer of Family Therapy and Play Therapy in the Philippines, who expounded on Filipino Families under Stress; Shamaine C. Buencamino, a stage, film, and television actress, who shared her daughter's story and struggle against depression. The keynote speech was delivered by Department of Health (DOH) Secretary Paulyn Jean B. Rosell-Ubial.

Kindernothilfe was awarded as CPN's Most Valuable Partner for 2016 in recognition of its unwavering commitment to advance the field of child protection focusing on the most underserved areas in the Philippines. Kindernothilfe has supported the establishment of WCPUs in strategic areas and the expansion of mental health services which are critical in the healing and recovery of abused children.

EVENTS

For the first time, CPN offered a certificate course on Trauma Informed Care (TIC) and a training leading to a certificate course on Trauma-Informed Psychosocial Processing (TIPP) coinciding with the AKO PARA SA BATA Conference. TIC and TIPP are continuing trainings aimed to build the human resource for mental health in the Philippines.

Over 20 years of research in the United States and other countries have shown the effectiveness of cognitive behavioral techniques in managing the effects of trauma. In line with this, the TIPP training was developed by faculty members from the Azusa Pacific University and more than 50 Filipino mental health professionals to address the gap in the mental health needs of children in the Philippines. The course includes topics on trauma and its effects, coping strategies, processing of the trauma experience and future needs in terms of safety and recovery. Faculty members and students from the Azusa Pacific University served as resource persons. Trauma treatment is a complex and challenging, though rewarding, undertaking and should only be done with proper training and support. Mentoring sessions with a trained mental health provider after the 3-day training are necessary to be a certified practitioner of TIPP.

Meanwhile, the TIC certificate course includes an introduction to trauma and its impact on survivors, developing a trauma lens, learning guidelines for managing difficult behaviors, and understanding vicarious trauma. TIC was designed to first avoid re-traumatizing survivors while also supporting recovery through creating physically, psychologically and emotionally safe spaces.

THE CHILD PROTECTION NETWORK CHARITY TRUNK SHOW 2016

The Philippine Tatler and Proscenium at Rockwell presented an exclusive Charity Trunk Show featuring the gorgeous artisanal works of Wynn Wynn Ong and the top quality exotic skin bags and accessories of Joanna Preysler and Eterno on August 20, 2016. Guests at The Proscenium Residences Model Unit in 8 Rockwell Makati City enjoyed the delicious creations of Chef Jessie Sincioco while shopping for great finds.

Each featured brand generously donated 20% of their gross sales to the Foundation. The 2016 Trunk Show raised enough money to help 61 abused children obtain one year of medical and psychosocial assistance.
